He will unquestionably devote the greater part of his message to the monetary question His plan now is to withdraw attention at much as possible from the tariff and cenfer it on the money question. While that would be a wise scheme on his part be will not be able to have his own way in that or any other matter As to what he may say on the monetary question no one here seems to care much. There is some interest, however, in what he will say concerning the method of securing revenues enough to earry on the Government and pay the interest and create a sinking fund to meet the principal of the tonds he has sold to pay current expenses of the Government in violation of

At the rate the gold reserve has been failing of late another hand issue; will have to be made. Congress will not be in a position to passany revenue legis a-tion before the holidays, and under the conditions in the Senate it is regarded as very doubtful if any leg slation of that bature can get through the Senate. The silver Democratic Synators, who make up three-fourths of the Democratic side in the Senate, use strongly opposed to Mr. Cleveland's fluon ist ideas, and they blame him for the woes, of their party. The silver Republ cans will work with the allver Democrate and the Populists on all financial questions, and those three elements combined may control the claborating a scheme to retire the greenbacks. But there is no possibility of any bill of that kind going through Congress at the coming session. As for issuing interest-bearing obligations of any kind to retire the greenbacks, it is doubtful if fifty votes could be had in Congress in favor of it. If the greenbacks are to be retired to make way for national bank notes, no matter whether or not interest-bearing obligations have to be issued, such a bill could hardly pass the Senate There never trouble with the greenbacks until the Democrate got control of the Government, and while some of the Re-publicans say that it might be desirable to retire them whenever there is a sor plus to the treasury to do that with still they do not regard them as any source of danger when the revenues of the Government are sufficient That seems to be the general view here, and it is not probable that any time whatever proposition Mr Cleveland may make to

The annual convent on of the State W. C. T. U. was held at Houlton, September 25 29, which the secretary and treasurer attended as delegates from this body and it was a meeting long to be remembered as one of the good things of our lives. During the year we have added several

THREE TENDERPERY.

Adventure of Three Lewiston Men in the Maine Woods. 🤚 Mr. H. E. Teel, of Lewi-too, has returned from Norcross, where he went hunting with Dr. Daintree and Mr. Cyrus W. Curtis. His friends have not vet returned, and will not till they have each killed a couple of deer, but the city marshalf a time was more limited.

count of the trip of the three Lewister men. After leaving Oldthwn, the next which they stopped was Millinockett. This farm has a history, having been to grow partly up to second growth. At the station they told the three sportsmen that it was entra little war through was going the same way that they were woods and snow-for it was snowing to some of the streams that one had to ford in a day's hunting. The question which presented itself to the three civilized men was how to get over the stream, but not to the other He got a pole sa large as a man's leg and laid it adross the stream. On this Le attempted to walk, but it broke like a pipe stem when he was in the middle and let him into four feet of the coclest ice water that eyer ran in a Maine creek. He laughed and scrambled ashore on the farmer side. Of course the men all tendered their sympathy. It seemed to seare the trapper as being a quantity to which he was en-like an inverted feather bed. They came to a brook-the trapper called it a brook looked at the unioviting water and said "No thanks, as the Marsha, got on and the frail if at swept of down stream. They had been told that from the brook to the house of the guide it was only a few steps, but Mr. Teckwaiked-ind not at a policeman's gait, sither-for an hour berries, preserves, jelly.

Mrs. Fairbanks, cranbetries, raisins, The trapper had scopped on his way and told the goide of the three tenderfeet and that gentleman had not op stream in a chaoe and arrived with them in an Mrs. Powers, the wife of the gunle, was a typical Maine womin o woods,-had a home as lovely and comfortable as a city home, with working kulck-knacks about and inviting open fires, but could shoot a gun, paddie a cance, or walk off on snow shoes with the best of them. One thing par icularly impressed M

Teel in his first day's hunt, and that was ! the great waste of hemiock (umber, Ad.) through the woods hemicek trees had been cut down and stripped of the bark. and then left to decay. Sometimes an area a mile quare would be found with the trees blown down in windrows where a northeaster had struck them. It was just after climbing through one of these windrows of Jallen trees that the marshal, who had taken the sher out of his rifle save the doe jump ! up and run. He jumped a shell into his gun from the magazine, and let it fig. It struck the young deer back of the day night.
